

ENTENTE PILED UP FOR HOMES ON THE ROCKS

Belgium Fears England.

France is very proud that she has dragged Belgium away from England.

During the war, Belgium was inclined to look rather to London than to Paris for guidance.

But when the month differences between Britain and France over the occupied territory on the Rhine became acute, it was necessary for Belgium to decide whether she would back up the French insistence upon armed measures to make Germany observe the treaty, or stand with England for moderation and a tempering of this with the stern German tank.

Marshall Foch in his conference at Aix-la-Chapelle, Coblenz, Cologne and Mainz, pressed his advantage. He knew that in the temper of the Belgian people no Belgian government could support a relatively "pro-German" policy against French desire for strong measures.

The Belgian politicians, after a vain struggle to avoid coming out in the open, gave way and signified their unconditional submission to Paris.

When France is credited with the support of Belgium, Poland, Rumania, Jugoslavians and probably Switzerland, her list of clients grows near an end. This explains the strenuous efforts of French missions and agents, which returning travellers tell strange tales about, to secure influence in Hungary, Turkey, in Hungary, British prestige is on top at present, but I understand the French are not without hope of undermining it and bringing Hungary over to the French side.

Rumania Strongly With France.

Rumania is strongly with France. The reasons for this date back before the war when the army was organized by French officers on French models.

But it was at Paris last year that France clinched her claim on Rumanian gratitude by refusing to sanction extreme measures against the Rumanian invasion of Hungary.

The Rumanian army entered Budapest in December, 1918, and has been waiting from the supreme council, but it was said then and it is said now that France tipped the scale in Rumanian favor.

In spite of the ill-feeling at Belgrade and Agron over the refusal of France to back their claims to the Real estate men generally agree the slack summer season for the business is at hand, although in several quarters it is said that for the time of year, 1920, is a rather better result in real estate than many years past.

As the business drags somewhat in the summer months, and somewhat well into the fall, a let-down in the rapid pace set by dealers up to this time can be expected, dealers report.

It is said that business is expected to pick up early in the fall and boom for a long time after that. No large sales have been reported in the last week.

Will K. Marr, of James L. Marr & Co., said Friday afternoon he had noticed a sustained inquiry for new houses in excess of the dwellings available.

"Buy now" is a real estate slogan at this time, dealers predicting a greatly overdone condition in El Paso next fall and winter. The Marr company has 30 houses under construction in Richmond Terrace. This company in the last week sold a fine 600 home in Richmond Terrace to A. W. Knight, a new owner to El Paso.

Bryant Harnes bought a $4,000 home in that part of the city. The two homes were the property of the Terrace Improvement company.

Adriatic coast more strongly against Italy, and to eject d'Annunzio from Fiume.

The other important state carved out of the old Hapsburg empire, Czechoslovakia, or Bohemia, comes within the English orbit. French efforts to get a foothold there have not succeeded, and the English mission and British business men are carrying everything before them.

Opposed All Over East.

It is too soon to discuss the Turkish situation, for it is still the subject of violent squabbling in the supreme council, but when the preliminary frontiers have been settled, and the mutual recriminations of Turkey, Greece and Bulgaria have died down a little, it will be found that Britain and France are opposed to each other for the east, and nowhere more than in the struggle for influence with the Turkish government in Constantinople.

Profiting by the example of Germany after the Balkan wars, wants to take the Turkish armies and train them with French officers, making a formidable military force that can assist her in any possible European war.

England seeks to prevent this, and to turn the Turkish army into a permanent force on the Turkish coast, and to prevent the Turkish army from being used as a permanent force on the Turkish coast.

Czarina Writes Czar Rasputin Urges Him To Go Slow In War Operations

By ISAAC DON LEVINE.

Article 44.

RASPUTIN'S war strategy appealed to the czarina more than that of the czar, when all was against him.

It is also noteworthy that the czar's military advice was nearly always of a restraining character.

At the height of Gen. Brusiloff's advance Rasputin transmitted through the czar's messenger the suggestion that the czar's army "should not advance too obstinately, as the losses will be too great."

The czarina has no opportunity to discredit him in the eyes of her husband. The "khakham," an ecclesiastical title, which he holds, and which she has brought with her from the Crimea, provided several such opportunities for the czarina. In telling of him she had to temper the czar's displeasure with the czar's "khakham" and to write that she was splendid "when her sweetest, the czar's Jew, was here and she was here."

"My Own Sweetheart:

"Ania looks tired and you see has cried much. She leaves on Monday with your friend and I will go to Tobolsk. Just before the end of the new saint. In despair to leave without your blessing for so far, and just when I returned, but life wishes me to go now. He asks whether it's true what the papers write that the slave war prisoners will be set free.

I hope not true, as would be a great fault. Its gripped one says Gutchenko and Rodianko have gone to give the order to collect copper. It is said one ought to take the initiative from them it's not their business. Becs

you to be very severe with the general that are at fault. You see from all sides terrible cries against Be-so-brav arise that he let the guard

be slaughtered, that Lache five days

running gave Bebo-brav the order to advance and he always put it off and then lost all through his obstinacy.

It's your special guard he has tried so hard to get. Let him suf-will be saved; one will say you are weak and don't stand up for your
